The Southwest School of Botanical Medicine

A 501(c)3 non profit organization

VISION

To preserve and protect the legacy and life's work of herbalist Michael Roland Shaw Moore, and make free and available to anyone the vast storehouse of information he curated in the last decades of his life.

MISSION

Preserve the website of the Southwest School of Botanical Medicine created by its founder and principal instructor Michael Roland Shaw Moore from 1993 until his death in 2009. Through the upgrading and maintenance of the website, protect and preserve his legacy as one of the guiding lights of modern western herbalism, and continue to inspire and serve the global community in the form of freely available information.

VALUES (core principles, moral compass)

In the spirit of Do-It-Yourself culture that Michael was a strong adherent to, we aim to collaboratively steward and uphold his priorities of protecting, preserving and expanding the practice of western herbal medicine. We believe knowledge and information of the healing power of plants should be freely available to all and passed down from generation to generation. In our efforts toward this end, we value collectivity and collaboration, a horizontal non-hierarchical organizing style, diversity and inclusion in decision-making, transparency and inclusivity in our financial operations, and strive to share critical feedback in a constructive way.
